

CLOUDS OF STARS

There are multiplied trillions of stars out there. Here is a view of star clouds in our own galaxy in the region of Sagittarius. The dark matter is gas that blots out the light from still more stars behind it. However, the existence of the gas makes the view much more interesting than it would otherwise be.

