

A SHORT SECTION OF A PROTEIN

This is a microscopically short section of a protein molecule. Notice how very complex it is. At this size of magnification, the entire protein molecule (of which the section below is a very small part) would be miles in length—and all of it just as complicated as what you see below, yet coded differently.

