

THE LEFT (L) AND RIGHT (D) AMINO ACID MOLECULES

The two molecules are identical in every way except shape. They are alike chemically, but different dimensionally. Each one is the mirror image of the other. One is like a left-handed glove; the other a right-handed one. But only the left-shaped (L) amino acids are found in animal life. A typical amino acid in both forms is illustrated below.

