

"All evolution has been produced by mutations, with only slight final modification by natural selection. They have brought about all the wonderful things of nature we see around us."

"The outstanding way to produce mutations in experimental plants and animals is with X-rays and other radiation. They produce large numbers. Without them, mutations are always extremely rare."

"Never, never use the X-ray and other radiation-producing equipment without careful instruction! It can produce mutations in your body—and they are always harmful, and frequently fatal."

"All evolution has been produced by mutations, with only slight final modification by natural selection. They have brought about all the wonderful things of nature we see around us."